How to use This Guide

This is a guide to referencing the most commonly cited information source types in kaupapa Māori research and academic writing. EIT uses the American Psychological Association (APA) referencing style. For more details and further examples, refer to the EIT guide APA Referencing Examples.

1. Decide what type of source you are referencing. For example, is it a book, an article, a YouTube clip, or an image?
2. Use the index at the back of this guide to access the relevant example for the source you wish to reference.
3. Follow the example, paying attention to the punctuation, capitalisation, and typeface. Each section of this guide has a reference example that shows how a reference is constructed, according to the four main reference elements:

Nā wai: Who - author or editor

Nōnahea: When - publication date

He aha te ingoa: What - title

Nō hea: Where from - source information

He aha ai?

Why do we Reference?

- He Matatika: It is the correct way to credit or acknowledge the person whose ideas you have used. Referencing helps to distinguish between your ideas and words and those that belong to other people.
- Hei Whakamana: To give respect to and honour others' knowledge, research or educated opinion.
- Hei Whakamaru: It provides a layer of protection for mātauranga Māori (Māori cultural and intellectual property) as taonga tuku iho. When you reference, you are verifying the accuracy and credibility of the author's information and protecting yourself from plagiarising another's work.

He aha?

What is Referencing?

When writing academic essays and assignments it is necessary to use other people's ideas, research, images and sometimes words in order to form your own argument on certain kaupapa. Referencing is the practice of acknowledging the sources of information you use in your assignments.

There are different styles of referencing. EIT uses the APA referencing style (7th edition).

Referencing has two parts: in-text citations and a reference list at the end of your assignment.

The in-text citation acts as a pointer to the full details of each reference provided in the reference list.

Paraphrasing is putting in your own words what the author has written.

Quoting is copying the author's exact words. It is recommended that you use direct quotes sparingly and only when necessary.

NB: When paraphrasing, quoting, and/or using images for PowerPoint presentations it may be preferable to use footnotes rather than in-text citations. Refer to the PowerPoint presentation study guide.

When a Reference is not Needed

There will be occasions when you will not need to provide references:

- when you are using your own experiences, artwork, photographs, and so forth
- when you are using generally accepted facts or "common knowledge" that is widely known, undisputed and easily verified such as historical events (take note that interpretation of "common knowledge" is dependent on who the audience for your paper is)
- when referencing Traditional Knowledge or Oral Traditions of Indigenous Peoples that are not recorded such as pūrākau, pakiwaitara, or kōrero tuku iho, only an in-text citation is needed. Refer to the examples below for "Personal communication: Traditional knowledge".

Final Check

When you have completed your reference list, check that

- each entry appears in both the text and the reference list
- the in-text citation and reference list entry match exactly in spelling and publication date.

In-text Citations

APA uses citations within brackets to reference sources in your writing. Citations always include author surname/s and year of publication; sometimes they also include page or paragraph numbers. There are two correct ways to do in-text citations in your assignments: The author's name can be incorporated in your text or included in brackets with the year.

In-Text Citation Paraphrasing Examples

The pūrākau that relate to Tāwhaki are well known, to not only Māori and Moriori but also, throughout the Pacific where he is known by alternative names such as Kahai and Tafai (Shand, 1898).

OR

As Shand (1898) explains, the pūrākau that relate to Tāwhaki are well known, to not only Māori and Moriori but also, throughout the Pacific where he is known by alternative names such as Kahai and Tafai.

When quoting, the same citation rules apply but you must also include the page number or paragraph number (where a page number is not available). Note that the year is always placed immediately after the author/s, while the placement of the page number is always at the end.

In-Text Citation Quotation Examples

Furthermore, “Kaupapa Māori methods were developed as the result of a drive to reclaim positive space for Māori in Aotearoa society” (Hiha, 2015, p. 136).

OR

Hiha (2015) explains that “Kaupapa Māori methods were developed as the result of a drive to reclaim positive space for Māori in Aotearoa society” (p. 136).

Te Rārangi Tohutoro: The Reference List

- Start the reference list on a new page at the end of your assignment with the title “References” centred at the top and in bold.
- All references in the list begin with the surname(s) of the author(s), followed by their initials. If there is no author, begin the reference with the title.
- Use the same line spacing as the rest of your assignment – usually 1.5 or double spacing.
- Place the list in alphabetical order.
- Format the list as hanging indent (first line of each reference is aligned to the left margin with all subsequent lines of the reference indented).

An example of a reference list is provided at the end of this guide.

Referencing Elements

The four main reference elements:

Nā wai: Who - author or editor

Nōnahea: When - publication date

He aha te ingoa: What - title

Nō hea: Where from - source information
